A Montreal dispatch says that "Confederation Day" was celebrated everywhere in the Dominion with rejoicing. Advices from the maritime provinces, however, do not wholly sustain this broad statement. Two newspapers in Halifax, it would seem, appeared in mourning, the national societies, Scotch and English, refused to take part in the procession, flags were shown at half-mast, and other signs of dissatisfaction were apparent.

The pleasantest feature of the celebration o the Fourth of July in Philadelphia was the banquet given by Mr. CHILDS to those employed by him in the new Ledger building Editors, reporters, compositors, clerks, pressders, carriers and newsboys were all generously provided for. Five tables, accommodating five hundred persons, were set in the press-room, and over a hundred newsboys were dined in the gallery. Several speeches were made by those who are among the veterans in the Ledger establishment:

It is one of the curious facts connected with the great exposition, that so impressed are the English employers with the superiority of the products of the French machine shops, that they are devising cheap excursions for their workmen, in order to give them the opportunity to take sdvantage of French skill. CURRENT TOPICS.

LETTER WRITERS from England continue their assertions of Queen Victoria's growing unpopularity. The Court and the shopkeepers both dislike her keeping up mourning; the former because there are no gaieties at the palace, and the latter because their trade suffers. The newspapers also denounce her habit of sending royal visitors to the hotels, and paying their bills, instead of entertaining them at the palace. Slanders are in circulation that she is in love with a servant named John Brown, because he looks very much like her late husband. A correspondent of the New York World says on this head: "She has her faults; she is now and then hasty in her temper; she is excessively economical, and I am afraid she drinks a far greater quantity of wine than most ladies are able to take at a sitting; but to impugn her character as a virtuous woman is a great perversion of truth, which is the more to be reprehended since it is directed against a lady placed in a position from which she cannot stoop to punish her calumniators. As I mentioned the Queen's well-known weakness for one more glass of wine, I may as well state how she acquired it. The Prince Consort was a gourmand, and the Queen, to discourage as much as possible his propensity for a heavy dinner, always dined with the royal children at mid-day. At the regular late dinner she only sat at the table for the sake of etiquette, and as she scarcely ate anything, she unconsciously took wine in about the same quantity as if she were partaking of the meal. Thus the habit grew upon her, and has never left her."

BREVET MAJOR-GENERAL N. M. SCOTT, ASsistant Commissioner for South Carolina, has submitted to General Howland a report of the operations of the Bureau in that State for the month of May; from which it appears that generally the condition of the freedmen is improving, and the feeling of the white citizens toward them becoming more favorable, the improvement resulting from the necessity of recognizing the political and civil rights of the freed people, and the dependence which rests upon their labor. The sub-Assistant Commissioner in charge of the sub-district of Charleston reports that no complaints in reference to the indisposition of the freedmen to work were made during the month. General complaints have been made in reference to work being neglected in consequence of the hands going off to hear speeches, by a person who issues what the freedmen call orders for them to attend the meetings; threatening them with furies if they do not attend; telling them that no charge can be made against them for leaving the crop, etc. This has tended to produce some disorder. In this district considerable destitution yet exists, and large supplies will be needed to prevent extreme suffering. In other districts much destitution and suffering is reported.

WHETHER THE Canadians are susceptible to the pleasures of being tickled with a straw portrait of the deceased sculptor in profile, the time will show. At present they are all in a work of his pupil, Mr. Spruce, and an epitaph twitteration of delight at their establishment calculated to increase the productive power as a "Dominion" instead of a "Province," with "Viceroy" instead of a "Governor," and an administration of "Knights" and "Companions of the Bath" in place of the plebeian "Honorables" who have heretofore guided their colonial fortunes. One would hardly think that the spectacle presented by the mother country just now would inspire any violent admiration of aristocratic and titled rulers, since the Peers are denounced as imbeciles, and even a daughter of Josephine by her first husband, the "Queen and all the royal family" are while the Sultan's grandmother was a cousin of getting to be regarded as expensive and not rine corsair and sent to the Seraglio at Con- but if she travels backward with the Lords, in-There is a remarkable artificial fountain at of $75,000,000 will be increased by many fear- what a large and early increase of Dusiness ful ciphere, and years hence she will have the work to do that England is now staggering under. IT APPEARS THAT the good people of St. Petersburg were rather loth to see their sovereign depart from their capital without being accompanied, as he has always been for the past eight or ten years, by an immense dog perial suite last year, when the Czar came to Nice to see his son die, and was much talked of never left a moment, sleeping always on a rug by his bedside. > Emperor will confirm the superstition. THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT begins its era of eace with unquestionable resolution. A volley of muskets makes short work of its enemies. SANTA ANNA was shot before he had scarcely time to issue a proclamation, and upon the ground, probably correct, that he intended a counter-revolution. It is very questionable whether his death was necessary to the safety of the Republic. He was an old man-nearly 70 years-had long ceased to be feared by any party, and it is still very doubtful whether his departure for Mexico was not altogether the result of a foul conspiracy against the old man's property. The Republicans have begun without showing mercy. It remains to be seen whether this severity is the evidence of strength or weakness.

NEWSPAPER editors are well paid in Paris. It s affirmed in the journals that M. CLEMENT DUVERNOIS, who was recently one of the writers of the Liberte, and who is about to become editor of the Epoque, is to receive a salary of $4000 a year and an "indemnity on entering sary-viewing the subject from this stand on his duties" of $20,000. A curriage is, moreover, to be provided for him. On some of the journals the remuneration is even higher than this; and it is to be remembered that a Paris editor does nothing like the amount of work that is expected in London. In fact, the Parisian passes the greater part of his time in smoking segars and in talking; and if he knocks | yield of these countries in the future. off an article or two a week he thinks himself wonderfully industrious. Sometimes he lets weeks pass without writing a line.

OUR CITY-HER PAST AND FUTURE.

The abolition of slavery has rendered necessary for Southern men to study with more closeness the value of the labor of the operative—their inability to control and command service as their needs may require, and the necessity of prompt payment in money, or some equivalent, for the description of the self the genuine of the self work done, will bring to view the importance of getting as much as possible for the compensation given, and bring into rapid use all the reliable machines which take the place of man power. This condition of affairs will require close observation and attention on the part of the planter or farmer, if he desires to succeed; he will have to be constantly on his estate, supervising every operation, and by close attention produce the best results. One effect this condition of things will be noticed. In the seaboard sections of the State, the hoe was used to a great extent, but it is an agent that requires much expenditure of human force, but with little result, the advantage obtained being that the work was neatly done. But, latterly, the plow has, we are informed, been much more generally adopted, with a great saving in labor, and it is stated that there is an anxious desire on the part of most planters to obtain the use of every agent that may be of the land, and facilitate its cultivation. Many thoughtful, practical men are of the opinion that, by the introduction, generally, of machine power into the State, and a free use of fertilizers, the present population of South Carolina might double her present productive powers, and it has been mentioned that it was possible for this State alone to produce a crop of 800,000 bales of Cotton. If there is anything approachorangeburg District St. Orangeburg District St. Dune last. tively and profitably employed.

The withdrawal of the Cotton crop of the Southern States from the general market, during four years of hostilities, caused the manufacturers of the world to make vast efforts to replace, by the growth of other countries, the great crop of the South. The large advance in the price of the staple, assisted by the steady and incessant efforts of the British manufacturers, caused its cultivation to be attempted in all places where there was the least chance of success. These strong stimulants used to force its growth have certainly produced considerable results, and our planters are now coming face to face with the competition brought about by these influences. So great has been the change in some parts of East that Egypt, that was formerly a food exporting country, is now compelled to import largely of provisions, and in some districts positive famine has prevailed in consequence of the substitution of cotton for grain crops; and in India also it has been alleged that one of the elements increasing the late disastrous famine in that country was the planting of cotton in place of provisions.

In these densely populated countries, food is of the first importance and the cultivation of a sufficiency of such articles on the spot as sustain life is absolutely necespoint, have not these countries already reached the maximum of their cotton producing powers, and under decreasing prices for the article in the markets of the world, may not our planters look for a dimunition, rather than an increase of the

We are disposed to believe that the most telling competition from these competitors will be experienced, when the present grow ing crop of the South gets to market, and we have full confidence that with a proper exercise of the skill and energy which our planters generally possess, they will in a few seasons become as they were before the war, master among the cotton producing powers of the earth.
